

Saturday, March 20, 2010

Psalm 7: 2-3, 9-12

O Lord, my God, in You I take refuge. Let the malice of the wicked come to an end, but sustain the just, O searcher of heart and soul, O just God.

Some issues and concerns that we face in life do not present themselves with clear and immediate resolutions. We do not understand; we get impatient or angry or both. For example, a loss occurs, such as, the death of a loved one or the loss of a job. Often times, we want to lash out and blame ourselves or someone else, or we feel that God Himself has let another or us down. However, if we can look beyond our complaint, beyond what our eyes can see, and trust in the One who cares about us beyond our many failings, then we will find peace.

What concern am I holding onto that our God is waiting for me to give to Him?

*Dear God,
give me the courage to seek Your outstretched hand,
so that I may no longer feel discouraged.
May I come to know Your peace.
Amen*

Karen & Rick Hampel